So if I change this option am I doing it only for my self or will this change apply to anyone preferred option that tries to edit this same spreadsheetIf you want to do it properly you need to have some kind of pdf converter that preserves the links such as the one in LibreOffice and Apache OpenOffice or Adobe Acrobat or use a pdf editor that allows you to put in those links afterwards PDF Pen and Adobe Acrobat for example.. I took the Word document-it makes no difference whether there is a doctor or a docx format and also hyperlinks when typed into a PIF file not kept it open in pages and then written to a PDF.. I took the Word document - it does not make a difference whether it is in doc or a docx format neither keeps the hyperlinks when printed to a PDf file - opened it in Pages and then printed to a PDF.

Its one line of code - Cells Hyperlinks Delete much less fragile and involved than intercepting follow the link which from my limited look at it may not be interceptable.. By default this will create and open a new spreadsheet document then create a link to it in the cell that you selected in the other spreadsheet document.. By default Access creates and opens a new spreadsheet document and a link to it is created in the cell that you selected in the other worksheet document.
